

Mutex (Mutual Exclusion) ensures that only one thread at a time accesses a shared resource. When one thread acquires the lock (e.g., Thread 1), the other threads must wait until the lock is released. This ensures orderly access and prevents conflicts or inconsistencies in the shared resource.